

CDC GLOBAL RAPID RESPONSE TEAM

What We Do

Support CDC experts in responding to health threats around the world

Roster, train, and maintain a workforce always ready to respond to international emergencies

Deploy trained multidisciplinary teams of public health experts

Provide immediate and sustained staffing for international emergency responses

Collaborate with local, national, regional, and international partners in response to global health threats

Provide trained “surge” capacity to subject matter experts across CDC

Build capabilities in countries focused on workforce development and personnel deployment